

Banappelorange and chocolate toothpaste

September 6, 2003

Morgunblaðið - 240th issue, Page 59

QUESTION & ANSWER

The Sportacus

The Sportacus is familiar to most people, he is one of the inhabitants of LazyTown, and this town made the news this week. An agreement has been signed between LazyTown and Nickelodeon for the production and screening of as many as forty TV shows about LazyTown in the United States. A total of one hundred people will work on the production of the shows in this country and their episodes will reach almost ninety million homes in the United States. On this occasion, Morgunblaðið thought of asking Sportacus a few well-chosen questions and he was more than willing to do so.

What do you have in your pockets?

Two apples, sixteen carrots, one melon and six glasses of water.

Dishwashing or peeling potatoes?

Washing and peeling potatoes at the same time, standing on hands.

If you were not Sportacus, what would you most like to be?

I wanted to be in the Icelandic national football (soccer) team.

Have you cried in a movie?

The cinema in LazyTown has been out of order since it opened.

What is the first exercise you learned to do?

I have been told that I started doing hand lifts right in the cradle, and that on one hand.

What unhealthiness gets on your nerves the most?

Ziggy's chocolate toothpaste gets on my nerves a little.

What is your main weakness?

Sometimes I want a little candy but I can not because I am a superhero.

Find four words that describe your personality well.

Activate – energy – future – generations.

Candy or apples?

Sometimes I want a little candy but I can not because I am a superhero.

What was the last book you read twice?

The Energy Book.

Which song gets you split?

“Bing bang” with Stephanie

What did you get for lunch last time?

I had a broccoli steak with spinach strips and a Brussels sprouts on a bed of carrots, garnished with tomatoes.

What’s your biggest prank?

I put real toothpaste in Ziggy’s chocolate toothpaste tube, it was actually a good deed.

What is the strangest food you have ever eaten?

It’s a banappelorange, a new variety of fruit that Maggi mjói is developing.

<https://articles.lazytown.eu/2003/09/06/banappelorange-and-chocolate-toothpaste/>